

2008

December 28, 2008

At last Ullr has given way and the snow has started falling. We've received 37cm. in the last 24hrs, 43cm. on the current storm cycle, and the total depth of the snowpack is now 147cm. It is still snowing moderately at present and more snow accumulation is forecasted in the coming days.

November 18, 2008

Winter is back at Powder Creek. This past weekend we enjoyed some fabulous early season skiing thanks to our 80 cm snowbase at lodge elevation. More snow was falling when we left!

April 21, 2008

Thanks to 63 cm of new snow and cold temperatures skiing was exceptional last week. Much improved stability allowed us to ski Red FernRidge, Express, Wolverine and Bufferzone.

March 30, 2008

A series of small spring squalls blew through this week keeping temps low for this time of year and steadily dumping small amounts of snow. Skiing was still excellent with the cloud and cool temps preserving dry powder! Total new snowfall for the week was 47 cm and the total snowpack depth is at 270 cm. Average minimum temp for the week was -13 degrees Celsius, average max temp was -4.

March 17, 2008

Thanks to 42 cm of new snow last week skiing conditions at Powder Creek remained excellent. What wasn't so good is we had to deal with two very reactive surface hoar layers (Feb 24 and Mar 8), that limited our choice of terrain. Hopefully these layers will gain strength soon. Total snow pack at the lodge is 268 cm.

March 02, 2008

Thanks to 35 cm of new snow over the last few days skiing has been very good at Powder. Total snowpack is now 240 cm.

February 18, 2008

Finally we saw the sun towards the end of the week after another 85 cm of new snow over the past 7 days. Total snowpack is 265 cm.

February 10, 2008

Partially clear skies and moderate temps allowed for big tours at the beginning of the week. The latter half of the week Powder was hit by a series of storms that dropped an amazing 103 cm of dry snow – trail breaking and skiing were epic! Average max temp for the week was –10 degrees Celsius, average min temp was – 12. The total snowpack is now 257 cm and coverage is excellent.

February 04, 2008

Fantastic skiing on all aspects thanks to cold temperatures and 99 cm of new snow over the last week. Total snowpack at 227 cm.

January 20, 2008

We received 32 cm of new snow last week along with warmer temperatures and some winds later in the week. Today we have returned to sunshine and cold temperatures. Total snowpack at the lodge is 200 cm.

January 06, 2008

Wow, what a way to start the new year at Powder Creek. Thanks to 130 cm of new snow that fell during the last week, we had to bundle up to keep all that cold snow out of our faces. For some skiers these were the first face–shots of their lives! Total snowpack at the lodge is 220 cm, way more up high...

January 01, 2008

Thanks to 73 cm of new snow, cold temperatures and no wind at all last week, we enjoyed some mighty fine skiing. Total snowpack at the lodge is 197 cm.